Finding and promoting green training with a simple online data base

The green skills course finder provides information about green skills training available in NSW.

What are green skills?

Green skills enable employees, managers and business owners to protect or improve the environment in the context of their work. Examples include:

- Assessing environmental impacts.
- Designing and applying processes that save energy, water or materials.
- Using low carbon technologies.
- Delivering environmental services.
- Planning and managing urban infrastructure for environmental outcomes.
- Fuel efficient driving techniques and logistics planning.
- Conserving habitats and local ecosystems.
- Organic farming.

How does the course finder work?

Employers and individuals can use the site to find training courses. Course information can be filtered by keyword, region, industry, occupation training organisation or course title.

A 'details' page for each course further describes the content and includes the trainers phone number for direct enquiries

Registered Training Organisations can use the site to promote courses.

On the website, you can apply for a log in and password to State Training Services. We will check the entries and publish approved courses.

Training must be delivered in NSW, map to accredited qualifications or courses and have significant environmental content to be published on the site.
