What is the Aboriginal Water and Sewerage workforce and training Initiative?
The Aboriginal Communities Water and Sewerage Initiative will support the employment of Aboriginal Trainees within the Local government sector. There are up to 30 Aboriginal Traineeship places available throughout New South Wales.

Who does it involve?
The Aboriginal Communities Water and Sewerage Employment Project is a partnership workforce initiative involving Local Government, State Training Services Aboriginal Services, the Commonwealth Department of Education, Employment and Workplace Relations (DEEWR) and NSW Aboriginal Affairs.

This project will help you build your Aboriginal workforce and improve your engagement with Aboriginal Communities.

Your Council will:
- Receive support in recruiting and employing the trainee
- Receive subsidies to assist you in paying part of the trainee’s salary
- Have access to a mentor for the trainee
- Receive Industry recognised training for each trainee employed

The project includes training for the trainee in the nationally recognised certificate III Water Operations qualification.
